The Workshop Discovery

context clues POV

Oliver stood beside Grandfather in the bright backyard workshop. Together, they assembled the wooden bird feeder by fitting the sides together and hammering small nails into place. Oliver held the wooden pieces tight so they would not fall apart.

While reaching into a box for more nails, Oliver noticed a peculiar wooden shape tucked under the workbench. It looked very strange and was unlike any tool or board he had ever seen before.

"What is this, Grandfather?" Oliver asked, holding up the curved piece of wood.

Grandfather smiled warmly as he looked at the object. "That is the handle for a wooden bucket I made when I was your age," he explained. "You may keep it if you would like!"

Oliver smiled proudly and tucked the special wooden handle into his pocket. He could not wait to show his friends his Grandfather's old treasure.
