I held my breath as I carefully placed the shiny red block right on top of the tower. It wobbled for a second, but it stayed! My heart did a happy little flip.

"Look, Mia! I finally did it!" I yelled, waving my arms in the air. "It's taller than my desk!"

Mia walked over and gasped. "Whoa, Leo! That is huge!"

"I know!" I grinned, taking a step back to admire my masterpiece. "I used twenty-five blocks, and it took me all morning. Do you think Mr. Carter will let us keep it up until recess?"

Before Mia could answer, someone bumped into my chair. CRASH! Red, blue, and yellow blocks tumbled across the rug like falling autumn leaves.

"Oh no!" I cried, dropping to my knees. My eyes stung with hot tears. "My tower is ruined!"

Mia quickly knelt down beside me and picked up a green block. "Don't cry, Leo. We can build an even bigger one together. I'll help you!"

I sniffled and wiped my cheek. "Really? You'll help?"

"Of course," Mia smiled, handing me a blue square. "Teamwork makes the tower taller!"
